City Angered by Placing of Kenilworth Extension on County High Priority List

by Elaine Skolnik

An angry city council, still smarting from the inclusion of Kenilworth Road Extended in County Executive Parris Glendening's Highway Priority List, met in special session on Monday, July 27, to restate officially their opposition to the project and to firm up their strategy for the following day's County Council meeting in Upper Marlboro, (see adjacent story.) Council is also requesting assistance from State Senator Leo Green and delegates Charles Ryan, Joan Pitkin and Mary Conroy.

City council members had been shocked to learn from an article in the Prince Georges Journal on July 20 that the Kenilworth Extended project was given the second highest priority in Glendening's list. Reacting swiftly, council fired off letters to the county executive, county council and municipalities along the Kenilworth Avenue-Route 1 corridor. City Manager James K. Giese met with Fern Piret, senior aide to Glendening, Frank Derro, chief of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission's (MNCPPC) transportation division and County Councilman Richard Castaldi.

Council felt there were a lot of unanswered questions. Why was council not informed about the inclusion of the Kenilworth Extended project in the 1987 list, a project they believed was on the back-burner? How did the project attain the second highest priority rating?

Council member Thomas X. White asked, "What happened to the (county executive's) plan to work with the city and to help keep Greenbelt informed of projects that affected the city?"

According to City Manager James K. Giese's agenda notes dealing with the July 23 meeting, Piret explained that because the county council was about to go on vacation, there wasn't time to give notice. The (County) Executive believes, she said, that it is important to get the county's views before the state at an early date.

P.G. Council Ok's Priorities 6-2

by Elaine Skolnik

The Prince Georges County Council on July 27 gave its blessing to County Executive Parris Glendening's Priority Highway Projects List for 1987. Designated as the second highest priority project was the widening and extending of Kenilworth Avenue. However, before the county council's final vote had been taken, Mayor Gil Weidenfeld voiced the Greenbelt City Council's strong objections to the extension, which would run from the Capital Beltway, through Edmonston Road, then cross Route 1 to link up with Virginia Manor Road. Weidenfeld expressed his belief that Virginia Manor Road could eventually become part of the Inter-County Connector (ICC), another project that the city and the county council have consistently opposed.

County Councilman Richard Castaldi employed various parliamentary procedures in an effort to derail the Kenilworth Avenue See CO. COUNCIL, p. 10, col. 3

Members of Council Offer Responses To Questions on Strategic Planning

by Mavis Fletcher

(Second Article in a Series)

(Since last year the Greenbelt city government has been engaged in a process of strategic planning designed to prepare the city for the next five to fifteen years. The nine strategic planning issues being studied are: Transportation; Land Use/Zoning; Public Safety; Park Land Acquisition; Financial Stability/Five-year Budget; Growth and Unification of the City; Recreation Facilities, Programs and Park Land Development; Facility Construction and Renovation; and Intergovernmental Relations. Nine subcommittees were formed, one for each of the nine issues. Each subcommittee is setting goals to be achieved and defining strategies to meet the goals. The News Review asked the members of the city council and the city manager to give their views on five questions about strategic planning. Here are their answers:)

Question 1: What is your overall assessment of the value of the strategic planning process as Greenbelt is undertaking it?

Council member Joseph Isaacs: "The strategic planning process, as Greenbelt is undertaking it, allows the Council, city staff, and active and knowledgeable members of the community (i.e. advisory board members) to step back from their typically reactive modes and do some proactive thinking about how best to meet several key needs of our city in the years ahead. It provides an opportunity to assess the overall environment — "the big picture" — in order to identify the most critical issues, develop achievable goals and objectives, and recommend short- and long-term strategies to successfully meet these objectives. The ultimate value will hopefully be the creation of broad guidelines that the city's policymaking body, the City Council, can use, reevaluate, and modify in determining the most effective approaches for addressing these priority areas of concern in the near and more distant future."

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld: The strategic planning process that Greenbelt is undertaking is very good and has some very positive aspects. First of all, it has resulted in the Council coming to the general agreement on the most important issues that the city should be addressing. Second, it has resulted in setting up a procedure for the Council to work with the staff and members of the advisory boards for addressing these important issues. This is the first time such a comprehensive plan has been attempted. Greenbelt's product is our quality of life, and planning for the future is the process that is needed to ensure that our quality of life will be maintained and improved."

City Manager James Giese: "The strategic planning process has to establish realistic goals and objectives in order to be of value. To be in favor of doing everything except raising taxes is not realistic. With realistic objectives that are prioritized, strategic planning will be very useful to staff in determining what it should be doing. Without (that), we have to undertake our own assessment of what council and the citizens want and hope that we are right. At this time, specific goals have not been achieved. That is the next step in the process. To date, the city process has skipped any extensive assessment of the status of things relating to a topic. This is a pretty knowledgeable group and the need to do extensive assessments has not been considered necessary. However, in order to achieve realistic objectives, it may be necessary to undertake further assessment of the particular study areas."

Council member Antoinette Bram: "When initiating the Strategic Planning process the Greenbelt City Council recognized the complicated matrix of issues it faced and councils will face in the future. All in all, its value can only be assessed in its results."

Putens Files for Election To Greenbelt City Council

Incumbent Edward Putens has filed for reelection to the Greenbelt city council. Putens, who has served three terms on the council, joins six other candidates who have already filed: Antoinette Bram, Gil Weidenfeld, Irene Hensel, Thomas White, Joseph Isaacs, and Keith Chernikoff.

Putens Biography

Edward Putens has served three terms on the Greenbelt City Council. He has been a resident of Greenbelt for 19 years. Born in Hazelton, Pennsylvania, Putens, with his wife, Becky, and three children, Kim, 18, Ryan, 8, and Amy, 6, reside at 8005 Brett Place in Greenbelt.

Putens has been employed by the Federal Government for 14 years and is currently working for the Food and Drug Administration. He has served in a variety of management and staff positions for the U.S. Department of Labor, the Office of Personnel Management, and the U.S. Postal Service. He has received numerous commendations and special achievement awards for excellence and has been nominated to several U.S. Senate Commissions and Special Task Forces. From 1981 to 1985 he was president of his own company, providing consultative services in the areas of personnel and labor relations.

Putens is also active in a variety of community affairs. He is a member of the Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club, the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center, co-founder and Chairman of the Greenbelt Arts Trust Corporation, the Greenbelt Jaycees, Citizens for Greenbelt and a charter member of the Greenbelt Consumer Co-Op. He is also a past member of the Board of Directors for the Windsor Green Homeowners Association, for which he held office from 1978 to 1985. Prior to his election to Council, Putens served as Chairman of the Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB), which was instrumental in the establishment of the Greenbelt Crime Prevention Committee. He currently serves as Council liaison to the Crime Committee.

While on city council, Putens has served on numerous county, state and national committees. He is a member of the Prince Georges Municipal Association and the Maryland Municipal League. He currently serves on two Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) committees — Member of the Transportation Planning Board and Chairman of the Public Safety Policy Committee since 1985. He also served on the Human Resources Policy Committee. In addition, he serves on the Finance, Administration and Intergovernmental Relations Policy Committee and the Human Development Policy Committee for the National League of Cities (NLC).

Putens is a graduate of the University of Maryland, where he earned a degree in Microbiology. While attending school at night, he was employed in various research capacities for numerous medical and research development companies. He co-authored several patents dealing with minimizing air pollutants.

50 Years Ago In Greenbelt

by Sandra Barnes

Several weeks ago we read in the News Review about the death of two Greenbelt pioneers — Theodora and John Murray. Subsequently, I came across an article about "Teddy" Murray, as she was called, which was printed in the Washington Herald of November 23, 1937. The article is contained in a scrapbook compiled by another pioneer, Harry A. Falls.

The Washington Herald reported on that November day that Greenbelt was about to have its first election to select five members of the town's first council. Candidates for council included Mrs. Theodora Murray along with 11 men. "Mrs. Murray," the report goes, "is running on a platform that stresses the need for members of her sex to exercise greater interest in the civic and political affairs of the community." She was also interested in establishing a community theatre and a day nursery "where parents could leave their children while they went shopping in the city."

Teddy Murray stated: "I volunteered to run because I think the women of Greenbelt should be represented in the town government. There are at least as many women residents of Greenbelt as there are men because so far only families have moved in. There are no single persons here."

The paper further reported that "Mrs. Murray is a graduate of the Philadelphia School of Expression and knows how to deliver a speech." Her husband was then asked if he would vote for her. "Indeed I will," he replied.

Teddy Murray received 103 votes in that first election—11 votes shy of the fifth place candidate. She was surely a woman ahead of her time, and although not elected, she went on to help

Night Out Against Crime

The Greenbelt Police Department invites all Greenbelt residents to observe National Night Out (Against Crime) on Tuesday, August 11 from 8 to 10 p.m. During that time, Greenbelters are encouraged to turn on their outside lights and enjoy the evening outdoors with friends and neighbors.

Participation in this event will allow city residents to meet members of the police department, the city's crime prevention committee and fellow residents who participate in neighborhood watch groups. It will also give children a chance to meet McGruff—the famous canine crime stopper and T.V. celebrity.

Aside from getting to know some of the city's public safety workers, participation itself will deter crime.

Career Courses Offered By PGCC at Roosevelt

Prince Georges Community College is offering several career education and developmental courses at off-campus locations including Eleanor Roosevelt for the fall semester, beginning August 31.

"Developmental Composition" and "Career Decision Making and Life Planning" will be offered.

Two Local Men Arrested In Brutal Rape Case

About 3:25 a.m., July 30 a 26-year-old woman who had been thrown out of a car at the Beltway and Rte. 50 reported to police that she had been raped and beaten by two men who had enticed her to an apartment in the 6100 block of Springhill Terrace. Believing that they were inviting her to attend a party there, she accompanied them to the apartment. According to Greenbelt police department spokesman Pat McAndrew, the victim alleges that, once in the apartment, both men raped and sodomized her, and that during the ordeal they beat her and threatened to kill her. Finally, the victim reported that they put her in a car and drove her to the location on the Beltway, where she was thrown out of the car. A passing truck driver stopped to assist her and called the Maryland State Police, said McAndrew.

Later, while Greenbelt officers and investigators were driving the victim through the Springhill Lake apartment complex in an attempt to locate the building where the incident occurred, she spotted the suspects' car traveling south on Edmonston Road. Police stopped the car and arrested one of the suspects when the victim identified him. Shortly thereafter, the second man was arrested at an apartment in the 6100 block of Springhill Terrace. The victim was treated at the Prince Georges County Sexual Assault Center and released. Arrested were Alphonzo Howard, 19, of 8523 Greenbelt Road, Apt. 203 and James W. Tisdale, 18, of 61544 Springhill Terrace, Apt. 202. Both men were held without bond at the Prince Georges County Detention Center on charges of first degree rape.

Soccer News

by Sue Cornelius

Registration for Boys and Girls Club Soccer program will be held Monday, August 10, 1987 at the Greenbelt Youth Center between 6-7 p.m. ALL players are required to register even if they played in the spring. If membership dues were not paid during the Spring season, they must be paid in order to be placed on a roster.

Teams will play on Saturday (Interleague) or Sunday (County) depending on the age of the player. Practices will be held either at Windsor Green field or Greenbelt Middle School.

If any player still has a uniform, please bring it to this Registration.

The program is open to all boys and girls between the ages of 5-18. Beginners are encouraged to sign up as well as our "veteran" players. It's an educational, fun and energetic sport, and all are guaranteed playing time, regardless of skill level.

If you have any questions, please call Soccer Commissioner Jane Cosner at 699-7805.

Caring Citizens Still Have Time to Register For Municipal Election

by Gudi Mills, City Clerk

During this 50th Anniversary Year, I am disturbed about the apparent apathy of the citizens who fail to participate in our election process. As I learn more about the early days of Greenbelt, I wonder whether Greenbelt citizens still care.

Fifty years ago, on September 30, the first citizens moved into this new community and, on November 23, the first five members of council were elected from among twelve of these citizens who wanted to serve their new community. The first council meeting was held on November 29, 1937, and the first Mayor and first Town Manager were elected under the first Council-Manager form of government in the State of Maryland. With the active participation of citizens, rules for the conduct of business and the governing of the new community were established. As one of its first items of business, the Council established a committee to study the transportation problem in Greenbelt. Not much has changed — or has it?

As of December 1, 1937, 210 housing units were completed and, on November 23, 1937, 96% of the new residents went to the polls. Where are we today? As of June, 1987, Greenbelt had 8,760 housing units, with an estimated population of 13,943. Of those, 2806 were registered (fewer than one for every three households). At the 1985 election, Greenbelt had 3222 registered voters, of whom 1880 participated in the election — 60.57%. This sounds impressive, but not when viewed in light of the total number of eligible voters who could and should participate in the election process. In 1986, 8573 Greenbelt citizens were registered with the county (fewer than one per household).

To vote, residents must be registered, a process which can be done in person, or by mail. Notices are published in this paper giving times and places where to register. To my knowledge, no other municipality or county in the state has as many voter registration locations as we have in Greenbelt nor as many hours. Any Greenbelt citizen may register at any of these locations. Sadly, since June 22 of this year, fewer than 100 persons have registered. On Saturday, July 25, not one person registered at the City Offices, which were open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. On September 15, it will be too late.

Do we still care? I certainly hope so. The voter registration books will close on Monday, August 17. Eleven days remain for Greenbelt citizens to register. Mail registrations must be received in the City Clerk's office no later than August 17.

Many of the "pioneer" families who voted in 1937 will be returning to Greenbelt in October. Let us prove to them, and to ourselves, that Greenbelt citizens do, indeed, still care.

Cleaner County Awards Entry Forms Available

Citizens Concerned for a Cleaner County (CCCC), is now accepting applications for its Awards '87 and Badge Award programs. Since 1981, CCCC has held an awards program to encourage citizens, business and industry, schools, public agencies and the municipalities, as well as the newsmedia, to help promote the "7 WAYS TO KEEP PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY CLEAN," and undertake recycling and recovery projects.

The annual recognition includes any type of educational and/or litter reduction and maintenance programs. The Badge program, started in 1985, is also an ongoing event that requires two projects over the course of one year, such as cleaning up five miles of roadside or one mile of shoreline, and recycling 1,000 lbs. of glass, 2,000 lbs. of recyclable newspaper or 100 pounds of aluminum.

Anyone who knows of a worthy organization, school, business, church or homeowner, can sponsor their entry.

Applications can be obtained from local libraries, the information desk located on the first floor of the County Administration Building in Upper Marlboro, or by calling the CCCC office at 952-3676.

Serious Lakewood Drainage Problems Aired by Citizens, Engineer, Council

by Diane Oberg

Lakewood residents came to the city council meeting on July 13 armed with slides showing surface water cascading down the hill behind their homes along Greenhill Road. Together with the city and its water consultant, they were searching for an appropriate remedy for their problem.

Lakewood Drainage

At the March 9 meeting council had requested an engineering study of stormwater problems encountered by Lakewood residents, especially those on Greenhill Road. John Robson of Greenman-Pederson, Inc. (GPI), presented the results of his study at the July 13 meeting.

In his written report, Robson said that test pits revealed ground water approximately two to three feet below the surface. He said that this groundwater, together with a large amount of surface flow, the topography of the area (located along a steep hillside) and the clay soils "almost assure foundation problems."

Robson recommended that the homeowners install foundation drains where needed and that they sod and grade their yards to direct the surface water out to the street. He recognized that "Unfortunately, this work is not cheap and not always effective."

In his written report, Robson said that the city could place a series of interceptor swales along the hill to slow runoff and direct water away from the houses. At the meeting he backed off from this proposal, citing substantial tree loss and the possibility of creating soil stability problems on the hillside and costs.

At the meeting, Robson presented some other alternatives, none recommended by him. He said that a trench could be dug along the entire hill at the base to siphon off groundwater and pump it to street inlets. This would cost approximately $150,000. Or, he said, a swale and dike could be placed along the bottom and the water pumped to the street. The estimated cost is $200,000. He said that the trench would only capture excess groundwater, while the swale and dike would be effective only against surface water.

He said one other option, installing a storm drain, would cost approximately $200,000 and had the least chance of working. In addition it would require major grading work and the area would lose trees and possibly experience slope stability problems.

All of the options, other than foundation drainage and yard regrading, would concentrate the flow of water into the city storm drain inlet, probably exceeding its capacity. Robson did note that if the Lakewood development were being built today, the builder would be required to install a series of swales every 20 feet down the hill.

Several Lakewood residents disputed Robson's recommendation. Cheryl Jones, President of the Lakewood Citizens' Association, said the main problem was runoff, not groundwater, and that it seems to be getting worse.

Bram, who had visited the site during a heavy rain, asked if runoff from GHI properties could be diverted partway up the hill. Robson said that to do so would require considerable loss of trees.

Jones repeated the group's previous request for several catch basins. Robson said that it is possible that this could help in a few spots, but he hadn't studied this option. He said that the clay soil and heavy groundwater concentrations may prevent surface water from percolating into the soil. He warned that care must be taken that the runoff streams are consistent and do not re-route themselves in different storms.

Jones raised some concerns in a letter to council that were not presented at the meeting, a major one being the cost of the work. She said that the recommended foundation and yard work could cost up to $10,000 per homeowner. Robson's remarks at the meeting supported this concern. He estimated that foundations drains would cost approximately $8,500 per house while grading, topsoil and sod would cost $5,500 per house. Jones also feared that water would be channeled into ungraded yards from regraded yards, causing greater damage.

In his written response, Giese noted that the water should be channeled to the street, where it could enter the city storm drains, not to other yards. Giese said that even if other measures were taken, the yard and foundation work would still be required; hence he did not favor construction of storm drainage structures.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld said that he felt that the county, which recently assumed responsibility for stormwater problems from the WSSC, should be involved. Giese noted that since many of the WSSC staffers have been transferred to the county staff, the county's response may be no different from that of WSSC, which said that it was not a stormwater problem.

Council directed the city manager to request a meeting with county authorities on the problems.

Northridge Woods

In the other drainage-related issue, the council agreed that there is no current need for a storm drainage system in Northridge Woods. This development is being built on 14 lots located west of Research Road and north of Ridge Road. A GPI study found such a system unnecessary at this time.

The homeowners will be required, however, to maintain existing drainage swales and to furnish site plans showing adequate provision for stormwater drainage. Since the natural drainage area for the lots in question is the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center property, no residential areas will be affected.

High School Reunions

Greenbelters who were in the graduating classes of 1956, 1957 at High Point High School are invited to attend a reunion of these classes on Friday, October 9 at Martin's Crosswinds, Greenbelt. For more information contact Lena Carter, 776-6084.

Upcoming high school reunions in the area include: Bowie '67, Friday, August 7, contact Arlene Simms, 464-1012; Einstein '67, Saturday, August 8, contact Josette Buhling Hyman, 384-8806; Groveton '77, Saturday, August 8, contact Michelle Roper Leach, 352-3400, daytime; Langley '77, Saturday, August 8, contact Karen Friedland MacDowell, 690-9112.

Godspell Previews At Fountain Lodge

A preview of the hit Broadway musical, "Godspell," was held at the Springhill Lake Fountain Lodge. On hand at the event, which was open to the Greenbelt community, were Greenbelt councilmen Joe Isaacs, Tom White, and Ed Putens, as well as the city mayor Gil Weidenfeld. A wine and cheese reception followed the event, which gave the audience a chance to meet with cast members and community leaders. The full performance of "Godspell" will open on August 14 at the Utopia Theater.

Petrucchi's at SHL

Performers of Petrucchi's Dinner Theater in Laurel will be at the Springhill Lake Fountain Lodge previewing their upcoming comedy, "The Best of Burlesque." They will perform during Happy Hour on Thursday, August 13. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. and the show begins at 7:30 p.m. Following the show a drawing will be held for two tickets to opening night on August 18. Happy Hour refreshments will be served throughout the evening. The community is invited. There is a small fee.

Councilmembers Offer Responses To Questions on Strategic Planning

Thus far with priorities having been set, the process is moving along quite well. I recognize that timely issues may often be addressed out of sequence either due to adjusted public need or practical necessity."

Mayor pro tem Thomas White: "It really remains to be seen. The agreed-to Strategic Planning Process was abandoned when, on April 1, one of the nine subgroups established at the February 16 planning session drastically deviated from the process by recommending the Strategic Planning Committee schedule a special session to address bond issue priorities. I believe this was a political decision designed to 'use' the process to avoid making tough decisions. One result has been a noted lack of interest or action involving the other eight important issues (see list above). The impetus for the process has been seriously diminished."

Council member Edward Putens: "First, remember that strategic planning is an effort to unify and integrate both long and short range objectives of an organization (in this case, the City of Greenbelt). It serves as both a 'planning' and 'budgeting' tool to give direction to an organization and at the same time identify weaknesses and strengths. Since this is the first time Greenbelt is undertaking this effort, we've got to ensure that the process is comprehensive and not only includes the objectives of the council and staff but also those of the citizens and organizations within the city. This step has been included in our overall process. Once this has taken place, our city will have a valuable 'blueprint for the future' which will provide direction to the council and staff."

Question 2: Are all the areas of concern which you personally considered vital being included in the current strategic planning process? If not, what areas were omitted?

Bram: The two subcommittees on which I served were Budget and Financial Stability and Land Use and Zoning Committees. I particularly chose these committees because I knew that this first committee would address the five-year budgeting and informed and well-considered decisions in this area will determine just about every other area's success. The Land Use and Zoning Committee addresses the physical determination of Greenbelt especially in the areas of open space, parkland and recreation facilities. It was another committee which addresses the city in a comprehensive manner. Therefore, yes, the areas of concern I consider vital to the future of the city are included in the Strategic Planning process. The needs of all age groups cannot be addressed without the money or the physical space."

Giese: "I think there were too many issues targeted. The County selected only three. I would have eliminated some of those considered. In a long list, I would have given consideration to the city's role in providing cultural programs and facilities, and the city's role in addressing social problems that may exist."

White: "Two areas which I personally put forward as areas of concern, and which did not achieve high enough rankings to be included in the list of nine items ultimately selected were: 1) City Staffing and Organization; and (2) Keeping Council on Schedule. My rationale was that in any strategic planning exercise, it would be valuable to thoroughly evaluate how the city staff and council are organized to accomplish any agreed-upon objectives."

Putens: "The intent of this process is not to find solutions for all of our problems. We would go on forever! The intent was to identify and prioritize issues and concerns. Obviously, not everyone is going to have the same order of priorities. But, interestingly enough, the major issues of the group as a whole, I believe, were included in the overall list of priorities."

Weidenfeld: "Yes. I believe that the most important issues will be addressed in the strategic process."

Isaacs: "No, all of the concerns I personally raised are not directly included in the current strategic planning process, but the vast majority are since the nine issue areas chosen were actually a melding of many more overlapping or interrelated topics that were discussed. Other areas worthy of consideration include: how best to meet the needs of the city's growing number of senior citizens and other special populations; issues surrounding the structure of government and the organization and compensation of city personnel; the city's responsibility for public education, law enforcement and counseling services in relation to the use and trafficking of illegal drugs; the appropriateness of our city's housing distribution both in terms of resident income levels and facility type; and the city's role in supporting the arts—cultural, visual, etc."

Question 3: In your opinion, has sufficient expertise been available to the strategic planning subcommittees to ensure that the plans being made are viable and sound?

Weidenfeld: "At the present time for the general planning concepts, I believe staff expertise is sufficient. However, when strategic planning objectives are to be implemented, we should then consider whether outside consultants are needed. Also, this is not a one-shot plan, and at least some parts of it should be re-evaluated every few years. Additional expertise can be brought in at a later date if it is determined that we do not have the necessary know-how to plan in some areas."

Putens: "A simple answer to this question is—Yes. The subcommittee included both a staff member, advisory board member and a member of council. Although not everyone is an 'expert' in an area, sufficient resources were available to the subcommittees."

Bram: "These subcommittees were composed of advisory board members, appropriate city staff and one member of City Council. Perhaps this question ought to be rephrased so as not to insult the expertise of our staff and advisory board members. Members of City Council are very aware that they have to answer regularly as elected officials to the citizenry and therefore act accordingly."

White: "I could not identify lack of expertise as a limiting factor. Where the process was before derailment, involved discussions and deliberations by the nine subgroups to develop mission statements, goals and objectives and to recommend strategies for accomplishing the goals. If I were to identify a problem, it would be the too narrow membership on the subcommittees. If the process were to be revitalized, I would recommend greater citizen participation on the subcommittees."

Isaacs: "At this point, it is difficult to say whether the subcommittee recommendations will produce viable and sound plans. Certainly, their development is occurring based on: reasoned thinking; information provided through staff assessments of current activities and projected trends related to each issue area; and guidance from a coordinating committee composed of members from the overall strategic planning group. However, I suspect that many of the strategies will identify the need for acquiring additional outside expertise (e.g. financial advisors, traffic consultants, etc.) before arriving at final action plans."

Giese: "Each subgroup includes staff persons that are very knowledgeable on the specific issues. As noted, there has been a failure of the subgroups to undertake formalized assessments of the various issues, but the group members are quite knowledgeable. If the subgroups put forth viable and sound plans, I would say 'yes.' If they don't, then maybe lack of expertise is a problem."

Question 4: Is there a mechanism to resolve or at least recognize cases in which one planned goal conflicts with another, perhaps in terms of personnel or monetary resources, or in some other way?

White: "Several mechanisms to resolve conflicts were included in the original planning process: (1) Staff assessments of goals and objectives for each area; (2) Review by the full Strategic Planning Committee; (3) Referral of refined statements of Goals and Objectives to advisory boards; (4) Further subgroup review to develop specific strategies for implementation; (5) Review by the full Strategic Planning Committee; (6) Public hearing; (7) Council adoption. If that process were adhered to, there exist several check points to test and challenge items that are being considered for approval."

Giese: "The coordinating subcommittee is supposed to deal with conflicts. At this time, there do not appear to be serious conflicts. There may come a time when objectives will have to be assessed as to personnel and financial requirements, and prioritized either by the strategic planning group or the City Council in much the same manner as has occurred with the bond issue authorization."

Putens: "We've not reached this point yet, since the subcommittees have just now completed their work. However, if there is an impasse or conflict it will more than likely be resolved by the Strategic Planning Group as a whole. If not, as I stated before, the public's input will have a great influence on the final decision."

Weidenfeld: "Some of the strategic planning implementation steps may have some conflicts when they compete for the city's limited financial resources. This kind of conflict is not new; we see the same kind of problems when the various city departments compete for the city's financial resources each year in the annual budget. Just as we do in the annual budget, priorities will have to be set for those conflicting demands. Of course, the five-year budgets that are now being used will be helpful on setting these priorities."

Isaacs: "In terms of potential conflict recognition, I would expect the strategic planning coordinating committee, in its review of each subcommittee's outputs, to highlight obvious conflicting goals and objectives. However, I don't believe the group has agreed upon a formal mechanism for such conflict resolution. Of course, at the implementation stage, the final arbiter must be the City Council—the only body which actually has the authority to decide on such critical factors as how strategies will be prioritized across issue areas and how financial, manpower, and other resources of the city will be allocated to meet these priorities."

Bram: "Every member of City Council certainly recognizes that goal conflicts certainly exist. These conflicts, which are often unavoidable, become the decisions of the City Council. This does not mean that conflicts should be built into the process but that realistically once the larger groups' work is completed it is the work of City Council to resolve the conflict and plan for the future well-being of the city."

Question 5: How do you see the strategic planning results being integrated with the work of the existing advisory boards?

Putens: "The final results, the goals, will have to be 'tracked' or 'monitored' and I envision the advisory boards as playing an active role in this process. In those areas of specific interest to the boards, they'll have to be sensitive and flexible to the final goals and objectives and ensure their objects and decisions are compatible within this framework. After all, this process will hopefully result in what we all, the council, staff, citizens and advisory boards, want to see for our City."

White: "The process outlined by the Strategic Planning Committee included the integration of the full advisory boards into the process. As noted earlier, I believe the participation by the full boards and other interested citizens could be enhanced."

Weidenfeld: "Several members of the existing advisory boards are presently participating in the strategic planning process and therefore have direct input. Also, the advisory boards will have an opportunity to comment on the draft plan of the Strategic Planning Committee. The boards' comments will be considered before any final plan is accepted by the City Council. Further, I believe the strategic planning results will provide the advisory boards with guidance on their deliberations of issues that they will be addressing in the future."

Isaacs: "I hope that the strategic planning results would provide a 'working blueprint' for not only council actions, but also the deliberations of the Boards advising Council. These Boards should also be involved periodically in assisting Council to assess the continued relevancy and utility of the original proposals and to modify them as needed to respond to the ever-evolving environment."

Bram: "Advisory Planning Boards, are just that, advisory. These citizens are appointed by the City Council to carefully and independently scrutinize an issue or problem and report on their findings. For the most part, the history of Greenbelt's advisory boards has been excellent. As in the past, I have no doubt that the advisory boards will integrate strategic planning information as they have other information. I would not interfere nor tell these independent boards how to come to their recommendations since that would defeat their purpose."

Giese: "Advisory Board review of relevant strategic planning proposals is an essential part of the process. Their support and understanding is essential. Once adopted, the planning objectives will serve as guides to the boards' work insofar as they relate to a board's activities."

The Greenbelt Vision in Retrospective

by Keith A. Winsell
(last in a series)

Wolf Von Eckardt

The final day of the New Towns Conference at the Greenbelt Hilton on May 1-3 started with a challenging lecture by former Design Critic for Time magazine, Wolf Von Eckardt. He placed the need for city planning in a broad, urgent context.

"Prophets and scholars agree that the world needs ways to make human beings whole again," Von Eckardt said. "Uncontrolled urban sprawl," he continued, "has resulted in an environmental mess" reflected in increased rates of suicide, divorce, litigation and alienation. Basically "Americans have not understood the relationship between urban public policy and the quality of life."

Von Eckardt, who previously was Architecture Critic for The Washington Post for eighteen years, in part blamed the limitations of the free enterprise system. Land is considered a "commodity," he charged, and "zoning is an invitation to bribery." The speaker observed that "there is no profit in a park bench . . . in open space."

Noting the achievements of Nineteenth Century planner Frederick Law Olmstead, as well as the unity of man and nature generated by the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930s, Von Eckardt advocated a "new-townization" of the American atmosphere. A 1968 "white paper," with an introduction by Vice President Spiro Agnew, suggested the creation of over one hundred "new towns," he said, but the project was abandoned. Recent changes in the Netherlands demonstrate that the "humanization of environment" is possible. The historic preservation movement has led to the "renaissance of the inner city."

Von Eckardt gave special praise to the conference's location. He called the "participatory culture" of Greenbelt more significant than "showing up at the Kennedy Center. Greenbelt is evidence that Americans can do better."

New Towns Throughout the World

The next session featured panelists with direct experience of "new town" development in the United States, Canada, Egypt, Sweden, Finland, France, The Soviet Union, and China. With transition in July 1987 to an estimated world population of five billion, the fact that at least one billion more people will soon live in cities makes planning essential. This point was emphasized by moderator Jack Underhill, a 15-year associate of Housing Urban Development's (HUD) Federal New Communities Program and author of books on French and Soviet new towns.

On the global level Underhill criticized the World Bank in refusing to finance new towns, labelling them "boondoggles." Interestingly The Washington Post revised its original view of Greenbelt by 1947, calling it "the boondoggle that made good."

The special challenge of desert environments was surveyed with the use of slides by Dr. Salah S. El-Shakhs, author of three books, including Development of Urban Systems in Africa (1979). The 50 million population of Egypt, he said, is confined to a relatively small region and there is "not much green." El-Shakhs estimates that by 2000 A.D. over half the world population will live in cities. As in Cairo, which has about 250,000 squatters, cities have generally not been prepared for the increase.

He suggested one possible solution as the creation of new communities, such as Sadat City, which is located between Cairo and Alexandria. Panelist El-Shakhs, currently Distinguished Professor of Urban Planning and Policy Development at Rutgers University, headed the first-stage analysis and planning for the Egyptian "new town" from 1981 to 1986. It already has a population of about one-half million and is expected to reach twice that figure. Similar communities have been proposed for other locations in Egypt.

The urban experience of Finland and Sweden was reviewed with slide images by Dr. Kenneth A. Johnson from the State University of New York at Oneonta. His work in Scandinavia has led to the conclusion that effective research and planning must be based on an understanding of national cultures.

In Sweden the social right to decent housing was articulated by the Social Democratic Party in the 1930s, he said, but high quality housing was generally unavailable before World War II. The "back to nature" concept indicated in Stockholm planning was partly inspired by the English examples created by Ebenezer Howard. After a five year absence from 1976 to 1981, the Social Democratic Party was returned to office. Single family dwellings are now back in demand and over half of the new structures are of that type.

Professor Brahm Wiesman, Director of the School of Community and Regional Planning at the University of British Columbia, added the dimension of the "resource frontier new town." He spoke of the example of the western Canadian community of Kitimat, built by the Aluminium Company of Canada utilizing the basic ideas of Clarence Stein.

Kitimat's development in many ways parallels that of Greenbelt. It was founded in 1952, about the time that Greenbelt became independent from government ownership. The Canadian community has followed a masterplan for 35 years and has good municipal services. It also has the highest voting percentage and the safest highway record in British Columbia. Referring to the use of such examples as the model for similar projects, Professor Wiesman concluded, "We know how to do it. All we need is the will."

A more recent success story in the planning field, Columbia, Maryland, was examined by Alton J. Scavo, vice president of the Rouse Company and of the Howard Research and Development Corporation, owners and developers of the new town. Columbia, along with Reston, Virginia and Greenbelt, had been featured in an hour-long WETA special telecast on the first day of the conference.

Established in 1967, Columbia was a response to "uncontrolled growth" in the Baltimore-Washington area, as well as an attempt to protect the environment. It has grown to over 70,000 residents, 40,000 of whom are employed in the community. An effort was made from the beginning to have "a racially balanced community," and the planning structure is based on the "neighborhood" concept. Created 30 years after Greenbelt, Columbia also reflects different housing expectations — "instant quality."

Legacy of Ebenezer Howard

The historical origin of "the garden city" concept was surveyed by David Graham Hall, Director of the Town and Country Planning Association, a national pressure group in London that was begun in 1899 by Ebenezer Howard.

Referring to Howard as a "visionary," Hall indicated he was responding to the deplorable conditions in Britain's urban areas. His solution, as expressed in Garden Cities of Tomorrow, was the "social city," which would have had a productive agricultural area surrounding the community. Although two such communities emerged in the early 1900s, the "clusters" of similar towns that Howard hoped for did not materialize.

Hall expressed his annoyance with the general lack of reform activity in England and that no government-sponsored "new towns" have been created there since 1970. He added that the "garden city" concept has never been "consciously applied anywhere in the world" as a consistent policy.

Hall also pointed to the intellectual legacy of Ebenezer Howard. In the United Kingdom Howard had the support of H.G. Wells and George Bernard Shaw. Other disciples include F.J. Osburn, Clarence Stein, Lewis Mumford and Rexford Tugwell.

Summary Session

Four of the key conference figures participated in the concluding review session — Frederick Gutheim, Jean Gottmann, Wolf Von Eckardt and David Graham Hall. Each made an appeal for

"To Your Smile"

Dr. Ray Vidal

Can children get periodontal (gum) disease?

Although periodontal (gum) disease primarily affects adults, children even as young as pre-school age can develop some forms of gum problems.

The signs of periodontal disease in children usually are puffiness of the gums or a tendency to bleed easily. Your family dentist can recommend an appropriate treatment as well as preventive measures.

Another form of periodontal disease is sometimes seen in teenagers who may not be getting sufficient rest or adequate nutrition, or who may be under excessive stress. It is characterized by extremely sore and tender gums which may bleed just by being touched or brushed. In this case, treatment must be coordinated with a careful evaluation of the teenager's life style in order to achieve complete success.

Gutheim, a former architecture critic for the New York Herald Tribune and The Washington Post, linked the Greenbelt experiment to earlier "utopian" communities such as Brook Farm in Massachusetts. He argued that Americans have not paid enough attention to the Greenbelt effort and observed that his many personal tours of the community since the 1930s have always included "more foreigners than people from the United States." There should be new towns "in all Congressional districts."

Even the founding political philosophical support was superficial. "The New Deal's commitment to Greenbelt was thin . . . There was no urban philosophy in the New Deal."

Oxford Professor Emeritus Jean Gottmann encouraged the audience to recognize that we live in a time of "permanent crisis." Social evolution is rapid and "the evolution of urban areas is never orderly." "Garden cities" must be made relevant at all times, not just in times of crisis.

Wolf Von Eckardt, author of six books, including Back to the Drawing Board: Planning Livable Cities (1979), advised that the term "crisis" is based on the Greek concept of "turning point." Planning, like gardening, is a never ending process, he said. But in the United States there is no consistent planning system, or even an adequate system of "maintenance." In order to change things, the message must be spread through the media. Architects and planners, in Von Eckardt's judgment, are partly to blame because of their specialized language. They "don't communicate very well. They don't speak English."

David Graham Hall concluded the conference with the suggestion that a "Greenbelt declaration" be formulated and promoted by the participants. It could represent the "beginning of a new awakening of urban development in America." The Greenbelt experience should demonstrate that it is as important to control the surrounding areas as the community itself.

In his earlier presentation Hall had observed that approximately one-fifth of the world population is poor and homeless and, although this is the "international year for the shelter of the homeless," neither England nor the United States has contributed enough. "It is the primary responsibility of the better off to help the disadvantaged." In that context the example of Greenbelt as a "caring community" has global implications.

WINE TASTING

Archie Smith III of Meredyth Vineyard will speak on wine tasting at the Springhill Lake Fountain Lodge on August 26 at 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. U. C. samples will be available for tasting. For further information on this free event call Linda Schwarten, 474-4555.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, On Tuesday, August 11, the 4th Annual "NATIONAL NIGHT OUT" will be observed throughout the nation under the auspices of the National Crime Prevention Coalition, so that citizens can show their determination to fight crime and the fear of crime; and

WHEREAS, In Greenbelt, the Police Department and the Greenbelt Crime Prevention Committee are supporting this "Night Out" activity and are encouraging Greenbelt citizens to participate in this community effort; and

WHEREAS, To participate in this event, citizens of the community are urged to turn on all outside lights and to join with their neighbors on porches, lawns or front steps to give a visible sign to all "would be" criminals that Greenbelt is united in its determination to reduce criminal activities; and

WHEREAS, Participation in "NATIONAL NIGHT OUT" will result in neighbors getting to know neighbors and bring about a better understanding; result in sharing of activities; and create greater awareness of strangers and unusual occurrences;

NOW, THEREFORE, I Gil Weidenfeld, Mayor of the City of Greenbelt, Maryland, by authority vested in me by the Council and the citizens of Greenbelt, hereby issue this Proclamation to designate Tuesday, August 11, 1987 as to express Council's support of this NATIONAL NIGHT OUT Program, to urge Greenbelt citizens to spend this evening from 8-10 p.m. in an outdoor activity, and to join with their families, friends, and neighbors to show that Greenbelt "CARES" and wants to prevent crime and discourage antisocial and criminal activities in the community.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the City of Greenbelt, Maryland, to be affixed this 4th day of August, 1987.

Conrad and McCawley Greenbelters in 5K Races

The Road Runners Club of America conducted over 75 distance races for women only, all over the United States on July 18 to encourage women to participate in running. The Prince Georges Running Club held a 5 kilometer (3.1 mile) race in Greenbelt National Park as part of this national event. The race was won in 19 minutes and 47 seconds by Mary Ann Zuckerman, an athlete whose caliber is such that she has qualified for the Hawaiian Triathlon called the Ironman, one of the most difficult triathlons in the world. Cheryl Conrad of Greenbelt was second in 20:25; there were 19 finishers.

To give the men a chance to run the same distance, a 5K race was held in which the winner was not the first person across the finish line, but rather the one who was closest to predicting his finish time. No watches were permitted to be worn or mile splits called. Ray McCawley of Greenbelt won this race by coming only 4 seconds over his predicted time of 25:25. Eric Johnson of Greenbelt came in 6th in 24:05, 35 seconds over his prediction. Jim Walsh of Greenbelt, actually had the best time, but his 17:19 was 1:04 off his prediction so he finished 12th; this type of race shows the advantage of knowing the pace one runs. The course was racewalked by Jim Wass of Greenbelt in 27:35.

The Prince Georges Running Club held its third annual picnic after the races. Those interested in starting running, or in looking for competition, or in running for a team can get further infor-

Swim Team News

by Emily Sonneveldt

The Greenbelt Swim Team lost its last dual meet of the season on Saturday, July 25 to Belair Swim and Racquet. However, the kids never swam faster. Carolyn Drake and Shannon Berger remained undefeated for the entire season, again scoring 15 points each. Jennifer Drake also scored 15 points this meet.

Other swimmers scoring high points were Cooper Pappas, 13; Kevin Floyd, 12; Trevor Groft, Josh Kepler, Jeanne Kepler and Kathy Barwick, 11 points each; Scott Luddy and Rob Reed, 10 each; Billy McGee and Eric Jorgensen, each 7, and Nicolas Jones and Jason Everhart, 6 points each.

This was a very memorable Saturday morning. Jeanne Kepler, an eight-year-old, broke the team freestyle and backstroke records. The freestyle record had existed for 15 years! The backstroke record was nine years old. It's obvious that swimmers like Jeanne don't come around often.

Both Carolyn Drake and Kathy Barwick broke the team and pool 15-18 year old girls' backstroke record. Carolyn Drake also bettered her own team butterfly record. The 8-and-under mixed freestyle relay team of Jeanne Kepler, Scott Berger, Kevin Floyd and Danielle Leas also again broke the pool and team record.

This was a final dual meet and a last meet at Greenbelt for some very special swimmers. Shannon, Tricia and Scott Berger will be moving to Kentucky in August. We will miss them. Three other swimmers leaving are Billy McGee, Scott Luddy and Rob Reed.

All three swam their fastest times in this last meet. Billy is moving to Pennsylvania. Scott and Rob are graduating seniors. They have both been on the team for years, Rob starting as an 8-and-under and Scott starting as a 9-10. Rob has made the backstroke false start famous. Scott has become the team's best butterfly. Congratulations to all these swimmers.

The divisional meet is Saturday, August 1, at Green Acres. Many Greenbelt Swim Team swimmers will be going on to All-Stars.

GHI Board Considers Staff Proposals on Computer Update

by Sid Kastner

A major topic at the July 16 GHI board meeting put the corporation in step with most up-and-coming organizations these days — what decisions to make about improving its present computer capability. Also, bearing in mind recent experiences, the board closely scrutinized a prospective mortgage lender.

Computer Upgrading

Management is requesting that the present computer facilities at the Hamilton Place offices be upgraded "to increase the capacity of GHI's staff to perform those functions already being done by computer", and to "provide sufficient additional memory and capacity to operate the maintenance management system that is being proposed". The three-year plan would ultimately bring all GHI departments into one computer network.

Presently, the GHI offices have six computer terminals which are directly tied to a main computer. There are also two independent word processors in the building. According to staff member Matthew Whitney the system is being used near its limit. Assistant manager Steve Wright added that everyone is working on a different type of (word processing) computer - if trouble occurs only one person knows how to fix it, therefore we need a universal, common computer system for everyone". He ended his statement with the comment "The system we have today is woefully inadequate for what we need today".

The staff has contacted two computer software suppliers and the resulting information has led to a preliminary choice of the Altos line of computers. Both Altos models available can support the memory capacity that the staff believes will be ultimately required for future operations. The full system would cost $48,000.

Board member Alan Freas agreed on the need to upgrade GHI's computer hardware, but expressed several concerns about the staff's approach in dealing with this complex field, in particular with the vendors' influence on the specifications themselves and the apparent predisposition toward the Altos line and toward the present operating software (Xenix).

Colton and Whitney, while agreeing with Freas that "the staff can't yet completely define its requirements" and that other alternatives should not be discarded, argued that "We've made good decisions in coming down to these specifications".

Board member Betty Deitch raised a more basic question at this point, asking as a lay person "What does this do for the members . . . if we go out and spend $50,000?"

Colton replied "Its real value is as a long-term tool . . . enabling a general approach rather than a "band-aid" approach to preventive maintenance (and) it will do away with lengthy manual record-keeping, eliminating human errors." Board members Wayne Williams and Andrea Haslinger agreed with this assessment, the former saying such a system "provides information faster and more cheaply" and the latter adding "It allows everyone to do more work in less time." These views were supported by member Nat Shinderman from the floor.

Board sentiment thus appeared to be generally in favor of the staff's proposal, but with reservations about the level of computer power actually needed. Freas, as well as Audit Committee member Lucille Jacoby and an unidentified visitor, raised a number of additional questions about how many terminals would be needed at any one time and about maintenance of the Altos system. The staff will now go back and re-evaluate specifications in light of the evening's discussion.

Lending Firm Recognition

Clark Financial Services, a private mortgage banking firm now based in Lanham, is requesting approval to begin financing GHI homes, and was represented at the meeting by Shekar Narasimhan.

The manager's memorandum to the board on such Recognition Agreements with lenders urged a general policy of great caution, in view of recent unfortunate experiences with Epic, First Maryland and some other mortgage companies. It therefore recommended that only conditional approval for a limited number of loans be given initially.

This caution was reflected in the intense questioning of the Clark representative, who has served as GHI general manager in recent years and more recently with the Share Loan Service Corporation (SLSC) which presently services GHI mortgages. Freas, and especially board member Chuck Hess, asked a large number of probing questions about the ability of the Clark organization to properly service GHI loans, in view of deficiencies already encountered with the SLSC performance. Narasimhan defended Clark's staff as having necessary single-family home experience, in contrast with SLSC staff who he said were more versed in commercial lending.

A member from the floor described her own personal troubles with SLSC - "I've lost financially as a result, and lost my credit rating unfairly . . . We've gone through a whole lot of mess here, and need to be very careful about taking on agreements with young companies."

Hess clarified that he was not against giving recognition agreements (to companies like Clark) "because lender competition is needed," but he and other board members - with Narasimhan in agreement - emphasized that such agreements were a complex matter and had to be considered very carefully in advance.

Diskettes on Retirement Available at Library

In order to aid Federal employees in their retirement system decisions, Congressman Steny H. Hoyer has provided public access to computer models for use in analysis of pension benefits under the Employees' Retirement System (CSRS) and the new Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS). These computer models were prepared by the Congressional Research Service.

Current federal employees who began service on or before December 31, 1983 have the option of choosing whether to participate in the old CSRS or the new FERS. The opportunity to switch to the new system will only be available during an "open season" lasting from July 1 - December 31, 1987.

Computer diskettes (IBM compatible) have been purchased and placed in all Prince Georges County libraries. Four libraries in the County are equipped with computers that can be used on the premises. These include the Hillcrest Heights, Laurel, New Carrollton and Spauldings library branches. In addition each library branch will have three diskettes available to the public which can be checked out for home use.

For more information, contact Congressman Hoyer's Washington office at 225-4131.

Public Asked to Assist In Park Watch Program

The National Park Service has begun a new "Park Watch" program in Greenbelt Park and along the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. Its objective is to encourage park and parkway users to take an active role in protecting and preserving the park by reporting suspicious activities, crimes, hazards, or maintenance needs.

Similar to existing programs at other parks and municipalities in the area, the program involves the placement of signs which encourage visitors to report problems to a park employee or by calling a 24-hour phone number.

Visitors witnessing possible criminal activity or a safety hazard are cautioned not to take action themselves, but to report the problem. Possible criminal activity should be reported to a park employee or by calling the U.S. Park Police at 344-4250, 426-6680, or 911. The U.S. Park Police information number for reporting vandalism or obtaining road service is 426-6680.

Visitors who wish to report maintenance problems only are encouraged to call a 24-hour answering machine which will be monitored daily. The number is 344-3943. Since it is only checked once every 24 hours this number should not be used for emergencies or urgent situations.

City Angered by Plans for Kenilworth Ave. Extension

Glendening, told the News Review that the Kenilworth Avenue extension was moved up to the second priority position in the current list because most of the 1983 priority projects have either been constructed, or are under construction, programmed for construction or in the project-planning stage.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld observed that the priority list was being moved through during a period of the year when affected communities did not have a chance to comment. "It gives a bad perception to an open political process."

Council member Antoinette "Toni" Bram feared that the Kenilworth Avenue Extension project would make Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) property so valuable commercially that the Federal government would want to sell off any developable land. Councilman Joseph Isaacs recommended that Congressman Steny Hoyer, a strong opponent of selling off BARC land, be contacted.

Council member Edward Putens suggested that Greenbelt call a meeting of municipalities in the Kenilworth Avenue-Route 1 corridor. Giese opined that the city might not be able to rely on the municipalities because of their desire to keep traffic off Route 1.

Letters

"Enough is enough!" Weidenfeld stressed in council's July 21 letter to Glendening. "Parris," he said, "we already have in Greenbelt the intersection of the I-95 Capital Beltway with the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, the intersection of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway with Greenbelt Road, the intersection of Greenbelt Road with Kenilworth Avenue, the intersection of Kenilworth Avenue from the south with I-95 Capital Beltway, and the intersection of the I-95 Capital Beltway with METRO."

In council's request for Glendening to reconsider the priority list, Weidenfeld pointed out that the Kenilworth proposal "in effect, extends the inter-county connector directly to Greenbelt and adds central Montgomery County traffic to the already congested intersections in Greenbelt."

Over the years Greenbelt city councils have opposed building the ICC, but if it were constructed, then they recommended that the ICC stop at I-95. The County Council is also on record against construction of the ICC.

According to State Highway Administration project planners, the ICC will stretch from Gaithersburg to Laurel and then tie in with Route 1 about a quarter of a mile north of Muirkirk Road. The project planning stage has been completed and an Environmental Impact Statement is being finalized and reviewed by the Federal Highway Administration. At the present time there is funding for only two segments, including one from U.S. 28 to I-95. The engineering phase is also underway between U.S. 28 and Route 1.

In the meantime the county is moving ahead to expedite the roadway projects overwhelmingly approved by the electorate in the November 1986 Bond Referendum. Among eight contracts for the design of 10 roadways is the straightening and widening to an arterial roadway of Virginia Manor Road. It will connect to Van Dusen Road, which will be realigned to connect with new ramps to I-95 and Maryland 198.

The concern of the Greenbelt city council is that Virginia Manor and Van Dusen Roads will eventually become the official route of the ICC between I-95 and Route 1, thus linking up with Kenilworth Avenue Extended. Neil J. Pedersen, Director of the SHA's Office of Planning and Preliminary Engineering, believed that this route would not "per se" eventually become the ICC, but that it would take off ICC traffic going to the Beltway in Greenbelt and traffic generated in the Konterra area.

While Greenbelt councils have fought the ICC and Kenilworth Avenue Extension over the years, both are included in the county's earlier master plans for roads and highways and are, reportedly, in the various area master plans, including those being revised. The county's planners recommend that the ICC connect to U.S. 301.

July 23 Meeting

At the July 23 meeting with Giese, Frank Derro, chief of MNCPPC transportation division, thought Greenbelt should support (1) extending the inter-county connector over to Md. 301 to relieve the Beltway, which was projected to become gridlocked in the near future, and (2) to support the Kenilworth Avenue study phase to "determine if the project should be constructed." He indicated it would take three to five years for this phase and, at a minimum, eight years for completion.

In response to Giese's arguments that the Kenilworth Avenue Extension "would funnel more traffic into a congested crossroads area (and that) new roads only opened new areas for development," Derro contended that "the more road options you had, the better off you were" and that the "development was taking place and new roads were needed to prevent traffic chaos." According to the agenda notes, "Derro indicated that the projected development in Greenbelt's office parks necessitates the road, not to mention the additional development at the METRO station."

County Council

Extension. At first it appeared that he might be successful, but as City Manager James K. Giese opined, "We won the skirmish but lost the battle."

Castaldi's first motion to delete the Kenilworth project from the priority list passed five to four, but a follow-up motion by Council member Sue Mills to substitute the Kenilworth extension with a road project in the south county failed after it was noted that not enough money was allocated. Another motion, to send a separate letter stating the council's action, along with the county executive's list to the State Highway Administrator, also failed. Still other motions by Castaldi to table and defer were unsuccessful. In the end the county council voted six to two—Castaldi and Floyd Wilson against (Mills absent)—to give its stamp of approval to Glendening's list.

In submitting the list to the County Council, Glendening said that the "priorities were based upon the project's capability of meeting three general objectives: relief of congestion, promotion of desirable economic development and provision of access to Metro rail stations."

Weidenfeld's Comments

Early in the meeting it was uncertain as to whether Weidenfeld would be allowed to speak since, as several council members noted, this was not a public hearing. But with Castaldi's help, Weidenfeld prevailed. He protested that the city had not been apprised of the inclusion of Kenilworth Avenue Extended in the 1987 priority list. (County Council had not received the list until about two weeks ago.)

Weidenfeld pointed out that Greenbelt has been bearing more than its fair share of the impact of development in the Greenbelt area, in particular traffic, pollution and major thoroughfares. He said the city council feared that the widening and extension of Kenilworth Avenue would create growing pressure by the Federal Government to sell off Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC) land because it would become more commercially desirable.

Weidenfeld stressed that as a result of the development boom taking place in the city and its environs, Greenbelt citizens are being taxed to buy additional greenspace to make up for the loss and to support a larger police department because of the increased crime in the Greenbelt area.

Castaldi told the News Review that he pressed for deletion of the Kenilworth Avenue project from the list because (1) there was inadequate notice for public input, (2) revision of the Greenbelt-College Park Master Plan is underway and the extension should be viewed "in the same context," and (3) the extension of Kenilworth could jeopardize the remaining open areas in BARC.

In approving the Highway Priority list, the majority of council felt the recommended projects were just a wish list and that there are not any funds yet allocated for study, project planning or construction.

In late summer the State's Transportation Oversight Committee, composed of the county executive, representatives of the county council and several of the county's state senators and delegates, will review the list with input by the SHA. At that time the city council will have an opportunity to present its position. The committee's goal is to develop a united county position regarding transportation issues.

Adventist Hospital Hosts Maternity Open House

Maternity Open House is scheduled at Washington Adventist Hospital on Thursday, August 13, at 7 p.m. This program is for those planning to deliver at Washington Adventist Hospital or who are hospital shopping. A question and answer period will be followed by a tour of the Labor, Delivery and Birthing rooms, Nursery and Post Partum. Call 891-5305 for further information.

YOUTH FOOTBALL AND CHEERLEADING

by Jeff Keir

The Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club is holding late registration for football and cheerleading on Thursday and Friday, August 6 and 7, 6 p.m., at Braden Field. Registration up to this point indicates a fairly strong interest in all five possible teams — 75 lb., 85 lb., 95 lb., 110 lb. and 125 lb. for ages 8-15 years old and for cheerleading.

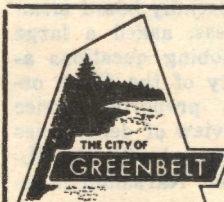

For football, youths are placed based on a weight/age formula. It is emphasized that the club policy is that no football team will be fielded unless 15 or more players are registered. Currently none of the football teams have reached this number. However, both the 75 lb. and 85 lb. teams are close. The decision on which teams the club will field will be made within the week, so register today. Practice for both cheerleading and football will begin on August 10, 6 p.m., Braden Field.

Also on August 6 and 7, 6 p.m. at Braden Field, the club is holding a "mini work-out" session to evaluate the physical conditioning of club members. All members are invited. Football players and cheerleaders are expected to participate.

For further information regarding football, contact Norm Sacra at 982-0996 or Jeff Keir at 552-9234; regarding cheerleading, contact Mrs. Umphries at 474-0311. Volunteer coaches are still needed.

Three Batting Cages Open at Braden Field

by Diane Oberg

On Greenbelt Day, the city's newest recreation facility was opened - a set of three batting cages located beside the Braden Field tennis courts near the east entrance to the Buddy Attick Park.

The cages, two for slow pitch softball and one for baseball batting practice, are open Monday through Friday from 4 to 8 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 12 to 8 p.m. Tickets must be purchased in advance at either the Youth Center or the pool, and are good for an unlimited time. City Recreation Supervisor Anne Herink said the cages should be open through September and possibly into October depending on weather and the amount of use.

Herink said she proposed the city purchase the batting cages to better serve the needs of city residents. She said that using the cages instead of city ballfields for batting practice should increase the playing time available on the fields. She said the cages should also help the city meet the currently unmet needs of adult teams in the city.

Greenbelt Little League, Boys and Girls Club, Babe Ruth and St. Hugh's CYO teams can arrange to use the cages without charge prior to the public hours. Other teams such as adult or non-Greenbelt teams can rent the cages on an hourly basis by contacting the Recreation Department Business Office.

Herink said the revenues from the cages so far are covering the staff costs with a small contribution toward the equipment costs. The recoupment of the total equipment cost of approximately $9,500 for pitching machines and the construction of the cages will require several years, she said, but the machines have a long life expectancy and low maintenance costs.

Responding to a report about 12:55 a.m., July 29 of a man walking naked through the neighborhood fondling himself, officers were directed by witnesses to a residence in the 9 court of Research Rd. where they located the suspect. They arrested a 27-year-old resident at that address who resisted arrest, fighting the officers. The suspect's dog, a large husky, also attacked one of the officers, who required treatment for dog bites at Doctor's Hospital in Lanham. The suspect was charged with indecent exposure, two counts of battery and malicious destruction of property. After appearing before a District Court Commissioner, he was released on personal recognizance pending trial.

On July 26 St. Hugh's Catholic Church at 135 Crescent Road reported the theft of a 4-foot high statue of the Virgin Mary from the front of the rectory building. The nearby school building and Jaycees building were vandalized by spray-painted statements and symbols on the outside of both buildings. Police have identified four juveniles as being involved in the vandalism. The stolen statue, totally destroyed, has been recovered.

A diamond ring valued at $2300 was stolen about 1:50 p.m. July 26 from the Best Products store in Beltway Plaza. The suspect asked to see the ring from the display case and when he had it in his hand he walked out the door and escaped.

Sgt. John Lann arrested two shoplifters about 5:30 p.m., July 24 who were stealing clothing from a store at Beltway Plaza. The suspects, a 26-year-old female Greenbelt resident and a 29-year-old male non-resident, were charged with theft and conspiracy to commit theft. They were released on personal recognizance pending trial.

An apartment in the 9100 block of Edmonston Court was entered July 24 during the day in an unknown manner. Money and other property were stolen.

An apartment in the 9300 block of Edmonston Court was broken into over the weekend of July 25-26 by forcing a ground floor window. Miscellaneous property was stolen.

On July 27 a carry-out restaurant in the Maryland Trade Center park, 7400 block of Greenway Center Drive, was broken into by forcing the front door. A quantity of money was stolen.

While the owner was attending a mass at St. Hugh's Catholic Church about 11:30 a.m., July 29 her white 1980 four-door Chevrolet Chevette, Md. registration SSP985, was stolen from the vicinity of the church.

Officer Mark Lagerwurf located a 1984 Dodge Ram van about 9:30 p.m., July 25 in the 6000 block of Cherrywood Court. The van had been reported stolen in Bayville, N.J.

A black 1982 Yamaha Maxima motorcycle, Md. registration 11137D, was stolen July 25 from the 6000 block of Cherrywood Court.

Thefts from and vandalism to autos were reported in the 6300 and 6400 blocks of Ivy Lane (3 reports), the 6200 block of Breezewood Drive (2 reports), the 6100 block of Breezewood Court, the 6000 block of Springhill Drive, the 9200 block of Edmonston Rd., the 100 block of Westway, 26 and 54 Crescent Rd., and Greentree Place.

The occupants of an apartment in the 6200 block of Springhill Court, returning from vacation on July 21 found the apartment had been entered. A full length raccoon coat, a black and white TV and a large amount of jewelry were stolen. On July 20 property was stolen from an apartment in the 6000 block of Breezewood Drive. There were no signs of forcible entry in either case.

About 12:20 p.m. a shoplifter at the Dart Drug in Greenway Center fled in a car which had been stolen from a construction area on Greenbrook Drive. The stolen car was a 1972 VW bus, Md. registration 133034M. The suspect was a 38-year-old black male.

A vacant apartment in the 5900 block of Cherrywood Lane was broken into on July 19 by prying open a sliding glass door. Evidence of a beer and sex party was found in the vacant apartment.

The Best Products store at Beltway Plaza reported the theft of a radar detector about 1 p.m., July 19.

Three juveniles, all Greenbelt residents, were arrested about 3:15 p.m., July 22 after they broke into a vacant apartment through a broken window in the 7600 block of Mandan Road. Using a baseball and a chain, they damaged the walls of the apartment. They were released on a juvenile citation pending court action.

A purse was stolen about 11:20 p.m., July 21 from a parked car in the 7600 block of Greenbelt

Road. Seen fleeing with the purse was a black male, 18-22 years, 6', 150 lbs., wearing tan pants, blue shirt and a blue baseball cap.

A reported theft of $54 was reported about 11:30 a.m., July 21 from a secured drawer at 7474 Greenway Center Drive.

About 11:45 a.m., July 21 a men's green Ross bicycle with a chrome front fork, Serial No. RK6044206 was stolen from the parking area in the rear of Beltway Plaza Mall.

Thefts from and vandalism to autos were reported at 119-139 Northway (several reports), 69 Court of Ridge Road, Beltway Plaza Mall, 6000 block of Springhill Drive and the parking lot at the Greenbelt Hilton Hotel.

Holy Cross Hospital of Silver Spring is seeking weekday volunteers to staff a new physician and medical services referral program. Volunteer responsibilities will include offering telephone callers referral information, facilitating appointments, generating correspondence, and producing reports.

Volunteers must be at least 18 years old and have knowledge of the geographical region. Typing and medical office experience would also be helpful. Training will be provided.

Interested persons should call Wanda Herb, Director of Volunteer Services, at 565-1384 for more information.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: THIS IS NOT A REGISTRATION FORM- IT IS MERELY AN APPLICATION TO REGISTER BY MAIL.

In the Greenbelt tradition, members of several women's organizations have agreed to prepare refreshments. A musical background is also promised.

Nomination Deadline

It is still not too late to nominate a candidate for this year's Outstanding Citizen award. But the time is drawing near. The nomination form, a copy of which appears in this week's paper, must be received by committee chairman Tom Renahan by Sunday, August 18.

Nominations may be made by filling out the accompanying form. Nominations from previous years may also be reactivated. If desired, they may also be updated. More than one person may collaborate in making a nomination, but all nominators must sign the form. Different persons may also submit different nominations for the same nominee, though organizations as a group may not submit a nomination.

Nominees must be Greenbelt residents. Current elected officials and political candidates are not eligible. City employees may be nominated only for activities for which the employee is not paid (excluding nominal pay).

The winning candidate will be chosen by an independent panel of Greenbelt citizens.

City Police Department Announces Promotions

On July 1 Sgt. Michael Craddock was promoted to the rank of lieutenant. Lt. Craddock will be commanding the newly-created Special Operation Division, which consists of the Criminal Investigations Unit, Selective Enforcement Unit, Canine Unit and Crime Prevention Unit.

Lt. Craddock is a 10-year veteran of the Police Department. He currently holds an Associate of Arts Degree from Prince Georges Community College and is working on his bachelor's degree at the University of Maryland.

To fill the sergeant's position vacated by Craddock, Corporal Thomas Justin was promoted to that rank effective July 12, and remains assigned to the Criminal Investigation's Unit. Sgt. Justin is a nine year veteran of the Greenbelt Police Department.

The vacancy in the Department's Canine Unit has been filled with the assignment of Officer James Donovan to that unit. Officer Donovan and his German Shepherd "Bear" will begin canine training the end of August at the Prince Georges County Police Department. Officer Donovan joins K-9 Sgt. Danny Love on the Department's K-9 squad.

CITY NOTES

The special details crew worked on traffic control in various areas of the city and installation of the new office trailer for Public Works. Work on the trailer was stopped on July 31 when the operator of the backhoe accidentally cut the gas line outside the office building. The fire department and gas company immediately responded and the line was eventually repaired. Miss Utility had been notified and marked the area — but not the line that was cut.

The general crew worked on concrete replacement in the park area across from Roosevelt Center.

Reception Will Honor Outstanding Citizens

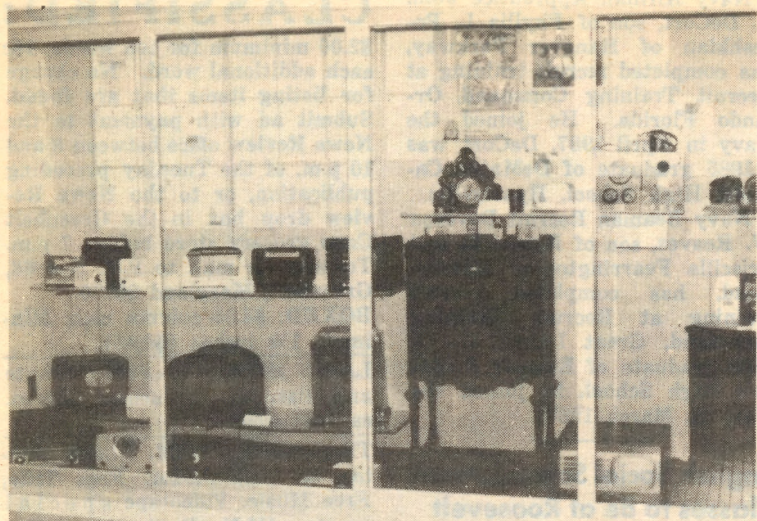

by Virginia Beauchamp

By way of a special celebration of the city's 50th anniversary, all former winners of the title of Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen have been invited to attend and to participate in the opening ceremony of the Labor Day Festival on Friday evening, when this year's winner will be named. All will receive special recognition for their contributions to the betterment of the community.

Following the program on the festival stage, about 9 pm., the honorees, their guests, and the general public are invited to attend a reception in the Center School auditorium, hosted by the Outstanding Citizen selection committee.

Many former winners have already indicated their intention to be present, including Leo Gerton, who will be coming from the longest distance. He now resides in California. Henry Fisher, who spends the winters in Florida, is already in Greenbelt.

Others who have so far accepted the invitation to participate are David Lange, the Rev. Kenneth Buker, Clara Brandt, Al Cousin, Ralph Noble, Al Herling, Elaine Skolnik, and Mary Lou

Lehman, Hall and Rogala Receive City Awards

Hard working city employees have again been recognized for their efforts. City Manager Awards were recently presented to Betty Lehman, Kenneth Hall and George Rogala.

Betty Lehman was honored for her commitment to the Greenbelt Recreation Department: the effort and time she has devoted to earning registered Professional Certification Status through the Maryland Recreation Parks Association State Professional Certification Board; her willingness to satisfy all necessary requirements by obtaining C.E.U.s at workshops and conferences, furthering her knowledge and keeping abreast of trends in the recreation profession. The achieving of Professional Certification Status is particularly commendable as only 48 out of 1,000 members have achieved this standard of professional excellence.

Because of a joint effort enabling the city to save over $6,000 in swimming pool repair costs Kenneth Hall and George Rogala were honored. This savings was the result of studies of the filtering system and ingenious conversion work.

Congratulations to all!

Czech Refugee Honored by Class

Alena Skala, refugee from Czechoslovakia, and a three-year resident of the United States, was the class speaker at Medix Schools spring graduation held May 2 at University of Maryland Baltimore County. Alena was chosen to represent her class because of her highest average class standing, as well as her inspiring success story.

Trained as a registered nurse in her native country, she arrived in the U.S. with her husband and young son in 1984 with no knowledge of the English language. She quickly learned the language and wanted to work, but without U.S. academic credentials, was unable to do so. She has now finished the seven-month course and is presently working for Dr. Peter Sheesler, an internist in Greenbelt. Skala lives in Laurel.

I just returned from a trip to Canada under the aegis of the Elderhostel program. My companions were former Greenbelter Ruth Levine and two other friends. We stayed at the Mt. St. Vincent Univ. in Halifax, Nova Scotia and met people there from all over the country. The university grounds were magnificent and everyone very friendly. We took three courses, potpourri, sailing and television. Under the potpourri we studied trees, flowers and shrubs and learned things we never knew. Our sailing instructor was a former sea captain who told some very interesting stories. In the television course we, the students, produced, directed and acted in the film which was taped. Each participant will receive a copy of the tape. The glorious weather and the experiences were unforgettable.

Congratulations to the J.E. Yakupkovic Trucking Inc., co-ed softball team who are 1987 Wednesday Co-ed League Champions. The Greenbelt Recreation Dept. awarded the team sponsor, Jahn Yakupkovic, with a trophy. Team members will receive champion shirts.

The team celebrated the victorious season at the home of Joan Yakupkovic, the team manager, Bill Osborne and Gary Stratchko, the coaches started the celebration with champagne.

Alexa Kiefner, formerly Alexa Lauber, daughter of Robert and Dorothy Lauber, became the new full-time Office Assistant for the Department of Recreation, Greenbelt.

Congratulations to Yon Jung, who received a Bachelor of Science degree in Electrical Engineering, from Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, Virginia.

Congratulations to Thais Teresa Starck of Mandan Road, who received her Bachelor degree from Colorado State University, Fort Collins, Colorado.

Navy Seaman Recruit Michael P. Brown, son of William W. and Elizibeth B. Brown of Springhill Court, has completed recruit training at Orlando, Florida. A 1986 graduate of Eleanor Roosevelt High School, he joined the Navy in May, 1987.

Navy Petty Officer 1st class Paul E. Moore, son of Margaret J. and Paul E. Moore Sr. of Mandan Road was one of many aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Thomas S. Gates, homeported in Bath, Me. while it was accepted for service by the Navy in a recent ceremony. He joined the Navy in 1981.

Donald Bratz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bratz, Sr. joined the United States Navy under the advanced electronics field program. He will travel to the Navy Recruit Training Center in Great Lakes, Ill. in October to begin basic training.

Congratulations to Jean Mattie of 6 Court Plateau Place. She won an employee election of the Classified Staff at Prince Georges Community College in March to fill a vacancy for the Vice-Presidency. On July 1, she assumed the office of President of the Organization under the conditions of that office.

Mattie and her officers-elect for the 1987-88 term were sworn in at a ceremony at the college on June 10. She now hopes to funnel her energies into presenting a very productive and fulfilling agenda for the year to benefit the college community as a whole. Mattie has been employed at the college since 1981, and is currently employed as an Administrative Assistant in the Community Services Office.

Donna S. Burns, has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of master sergeant. She is an administration chief at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, with the Air Training Command. Her husband Michael is the son of Marion Mobley of Breezewood.

Navy Airman Apprentice John A. DeCort, son of Phyllis L. Peshkian of Hanover Parkway, has completed recruit training at Recruit Training Command, Orlando Florida. He joined the Navy in April 1987. DeCort was a 1985 graduate of DeMatha Catholic High School, Hyattsville.

Navy Seaman Recruit Deveron W. Reaves, son of Robert L. and Priscilla Fearrington of Mandan Road, has completed recruit training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, IL. A 1986 graduate of Eleanor Roosevelt High School, he joined the Navy in March 1987.

English, Social Science, Math Classes to Be at Roosevelt
